A PROGRAM FOR JOBS

With each passing day it becomes more clear that the country needs a massive full-employment policy that guarantees a decent job at a decent wage to everyone who can work....and some form of economic controls to end the high inflation that we have now. Now a lot of people are worried about this, even those who go along with the President's plan for a big budget deficit to stimulate the economy. Too much government control, they insist, means the end of our free enterprise system. What a lot of people are forgetting, is that the free enterprise system is not putting eight million people to work. The free enterprise system right now locks 85 million people into poverty or near poverty. And the free enterprise system may be doomed without the help of the Federal government. In fact, only bold steps that put people to work and insure their earnings earn't eaten away by high inflation, can save the system.

I remember back in the 1930's, during the height of the depression, the government took steps to put people to work and saved the system in the process. The WPA, the CCC camps, saved a lot of people. And some people are suggesting right now that the Work's Progress Administration come alive again because this was a program of work relief that, in spite of all the myths of workers sleeping on their shovels, was extremely effective. It put bread in the mouths of a lot of hungry people and it put clothes on the backs of a lot of poor people. In fact, the WPA put a total of over eight million people to work on projects that are being used today. At its peak, one out of every 20 American workers were on its payroll. They built 650,000 miles of new roads, 124,000 new or rebuilt bridges and viaducts, 120,000 public buildings such as libraries, schools, offices. Right now our cities can use these things. We need new libraries, we need new streets, parks, playgrounds, athletic fields and thousands of hospital plants and other facilities. And in addition, WPA programs taught reading and writing to a million and a half adults. They organized nursery schools, they produced clothing for the needy, and revived cultural life. Now this is an extraordinary record and it is typical of the ingratitude of many people who survived that era on their father's WPA checks and now claim that it was a boondoggle, whose revival will endanger the system. All of this doesn't mean that we should copy the WPA form in its entirity. It was a relief program whose pay scales were deliberately kept low and which rotated the job list on and off its payrolls. But what is needed today is a program that delivers decent jobs at decent wages and is conceived on a permanent basis. The times have changed, and that means the services are greater. And so that basic job creation program will be some form of public service employment with appropriate training and career structures. But WPA teaches us that the government as a job creator can put people to work constructively to improve the quality of life and save the system that is falling apart before our eyes. RIGHT ON!

General Warner To Take Command of the 9th Infantry Division

FORT LEWIS, WA.--Major General John Q. Henion, commander of the 9th Infantry Division and Fort Lewis for the past 17 months, will depart August 12 to become Chief of Staff of the U.S. Army Forces Command (FORSCOM), with headquarters at Fort McPherson, Georgia.

His successor here will be an officer who served as both a Navy seaman and an Army private in World War II -- Major General Volney F. Warner.

General Warner, 49, from Woonsocket, South Dakota, has been assistant chief of staff for operations at FORSCOM Headquarters since last October.

In 1944, Gen. Warner took boot camp training in the Navy , then transferred to the Army. He completed Army basic training and served as an Infantry private until entering the U.S. Military Academy.

He was graduated from West Point in 1950--a class that sustained heavy losses in Korea. That country was Lieutenant Warner's first duty destination. He served in combat as a platoon leader and then executive officer of a company of the 24th Infantry Division.

Later he commanded a company in the U.S. force occupying the Free Territory of Trieste.

He served in a series of important posts in the Vietnam War--a provincial senior advisor in 1963, as a Southeast Asia planning staff officer in the Pentagon in 1966-67, then as Military Assistant to the Special Assistant to the President on Vietnam Affairs, working on the Vietnam pacification program, and finally as a brigade commander and II Field Force staff officer in Vietnam.

His education includes Master's degrees in Psychology and International Affairs, and completion of the National War College course.

General and Mrs. (Janice B.) Warner have two sons, Volney and Jerry, both students at West Point, and two daughters, Vickie, a West Georgia University graduate student, and Valerie, who resides with them.

Gen. Henion, 52, attended the University of Washington three years before he was called into the Army. He earned a commission through OCS is 1944.

He commanded the U.S. Army Recruiting Command for two years before he and Major General William B. Fulton, the 9th Division's first commander after it was reactivated here in May 1972, switched jobs.

Gen. Henion will replace Major General Jeffrey G. Smith, who will assume command of 1st U.S. Army, a three-star billet.

Police Clear Rash of Auto Thefts

Tacoma police investigators assigned to the Auto Theft Detail have cleared 19 individual cases of theft from the Hilltop Area with the apprehension of nine juveniles.

Captain Wallace Seymour, Criminal Investigations Division Commander, said the apprehensions were made within the past 48 hours following information obtained from witnesses who were able to identify several of the youths seen occupying a stolen vehicle.

"We arrested nine youths ranging from ages 11 to 15 years," Seymour explained. The Auto Theft Detail was credited with the apprehensions after receiving information and developing several good leads. "The citizen cooperation and support was present in solving these cases, certainly make our work a great deal easier," Seymour added.

In addition to clearing the 19 car thefts, the arrests also solved two larcenies which took place at roughly the same time of the thefts of the vehicles. "Apparently the reason for the thefts was to joy ride", Seymour said. "Kids with not much to do other than find something 'exciting' were responsible for the thefts and the best part is that they were apprehended before someone was injured as a result of an inexperienced driver becoming involved in an auto accident."

All of the youths were turned over to juvenile authorities by police investigators. Seymour said all of the vehicles stolen had been recovered, relatively free of any lasting damage.

Youth Development and Learning Center An Alternate School

by Barbara Henderson

The Juvenile Parole Services program of the Department of Social & Health Services is a state-wide program. Juvenile Parole Services has responsibility for providing services for youth committed to the state as juvenile delinquents and youths transferred to Washington for supervision under the Interstate Compact on Juveniles. On a choosing basis services to non-committed delinquents are provided by the Learning Center which is an extension of the Juvenile Rehabilitation System.

The Youth Development and Learning Center located in the Hess Building, downtown at 901 Tacoma Ave. So. is designed to fill the basic educational needs of these youth. Youth exiting from state juvenile correctional institutions during a regular school year are, sometimes incapable of getting along in regular school classes which are not at the same academic pace to that which they were used to. Some young people are unable to handle a regular school program for a variety of reasons - academic, social or emotional. They can be programmed into the Youth Development and Learning Centers. Also, those youth who have already dropped out of school or have limited social, emotional and intellectual abilities may be able to fit into this program. The Youth Development and Learning Center is an alternate high school for those youth.

The program is primarily concerned with academic deficiency and socialization skills, attempting to get youth back into the mainstream of education. The youth are individually programmed. There are about 115 youth in the program, the average age is sixteen. The advantages of the program are that the teachers are more available. It is a educational/social program within a therapeudic atmosphere where youth may obtain credit toward H.S. graduation, earn a G.E.D., or work toward return to a regular high school program.

The man in charge of the program is Ralph E. Sherfey, it's educational consultant. They have a strong teaching staff, knowledgeable of what they're doing. They interact to produce the program. There is a summer session on now. There are 180 regular school days and 47 summer days. There are five centers throughout the state of Washington. The program tries to reform and educate the youth so that they may be ready for society. Unfortunately, some are failures. They lose about 10 to 12% every year because they can't cope.

The alternate school is an efficient thing and the kids do benefit from it.

Something To Think About

-BY Barbara Henderson

We may not realize it, but there is a communication gap - between blacks and whites as well as blacks and blacks, between the younger and older generations and between the authority and the minority. Our job is to bridge that gap.

I think that the real reason for the communication gap comes from a lack of understanding. Everyone hears but no one listens or understands.

Sometimes we stereotype people. Like all white people are sneaky or blacks are lazy. These are all false accusations, because every person is unique. No two people are the same, and we should learn to accept people for what they are, not who they are.

Next time somebody tells you something listen attentively, not to the words, but to what point they're trying to get across.

Let's build bridges everywhere to make a passage through the communication gap. Think about it.

Save Your Bike Program Set

The Tacoma Police Department begins a new program next Tuesday (July 22) in an attempt to discourage bicycle theft and provide for better return of recovered bicycles which have been stolen.

The program will include permanently engraving identification numbers on the frames of bicycles of persons of all ages. The department will provide the engraving equipment and people to perform the marking free of charge at parks throughout the city.

"We hope to engrave as many bikes as possible during the three-week program," explained Chief of Police Lyle E. Smith. "The two college students who are working within our Crime Prevention Unit this summer have designed an exceptionally workable program and we urge the public to make use of the protection at any of the parks on their schedule."

Tips on bicycle safety, security and operation will be given by Dave Berry and Dave Thatcher, both seniors in police science from Washington State University. In addition to their presentations, both interns will be using heavy-duty engravers to etch driver license numbers of similar identification numbers on the bicycle frames.

"The engraving does not damage the bicycle in any manner nor does it deface the finish," Smith added. "The interns will make their engravings in locations which do not show except when the bicycle is turned upside down."

The police department believes this identification system will help return those bicycles which it is able to recover once they have been stolen. Without some form of identification, the department must place the recovered bicycles up for public auction thus a great loss is experienced by those who otherwise might have had their stolen bicycle returned by authorities.

Bicycle theft is not a small business in Tacoma as departmental statistics illustrate. Last year, there were 879 bicycles stolen in the city representing a loss of about $66,000. Only 55 bicycles were recovered and returned to their owners which gave a recovery value of about $4,600!

"Parents should give their children their driver's license number so that this may be etched into the frame," Smith added. "Since the youngsters do not normally have their own identification numbers of any type, their parents numbers afford the best identification possible. With the driver's license number, we can trace down a person even though the family might move several times. It gives us a starting place to returning lost property and also can be helpful in actually determining if a bicycle is stolen or not since officers can check out the numbers very easily."

The program is being conducted in cooperation with the Metropolitan Park Department according to the following schedule:

Tuesday, July 22*10:00 a.m., Garfield Park at North 8th and Borough Road; 12:30 p.m., Vassault at North 37th and Vassault; 2:30 p.m. Jane Clark at North 39th and Ferdinand.

Summer Counseling Program for Integration in Public Schools

By Barbara Henderson

Summer counseling is an URRD(Urban Rural Racial Disadvantaged) funded program. It is now in its tent year of operation. The summer counseling program is a major factor in assisting the Tacoma Public Schools in eli minating segregation and promoting integration.

The program is aimed at the dropout and the potential dropout, the alienated and the disadvantaged. In addition to dealing with these youngsters, the program is a major factor in maintaining racial balance, and supporting integration efforts.

Summer counseling is primarily trying to reach out to students in the community of all levels of education. They assist elementary, junior and high schools. They want to get students ready for a school atsmosphere.

The emphasis on the desegregation-interation/transition portion of the program is on the student in tranisition from one school to another.

This summer, the staff of 100 will be assisting some 4,000 students This summer counseling program is designed to rovide a personalized approch that will facilitate a better working relationship and understaning among students, parents, community, agencies and school personnel. The program offers edcuation, career, and persona-social counseling and trys to build up efforts of the school and community in resolving difficulties of alienated and disadvantaged students.

Administrators, parents and others have agreed that the personal approch of the summer counseling program has had a great influence on the smoothness of integration plans in Tacoma. Mr. John Kvamme is the director of Summer Counseling.

This will be complimented by a stirring patriotic presentation by Dr. R. Franklin Thompson, Chancellor of the University of Puget Sound.

The program will be rounded out by the Betsey Ross Bicentennial Ladies carrying their hand made Bicentennial Flag, the Bicentennial Bison, and participation by U.S. Servicemen released as P.O.W.'s from North Vietamese prisons.

Rotary President Conrad Peterson credited the cooperation of the United States, Army, the Bicentennial Commission and the Tacoma School District in creation of the stellar program.

The public is invited free of charge to the Stadium Bowl event. The Army's portion of the program weaves a story of United States history in period uniforms, Ninth Division band music, and flags accompanied by narration. This included a tribute to the role of the U.S. Army in America's first 200 years.

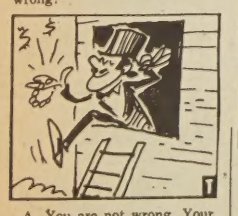
Q. I always used to enjoy films about gentlemen jewel thieves until I became co-starred as one of their victims. While my wife and I were vacationing her favorite pearl necklace was stolen. It was valued at $600, but our insurance company only reimbursed me for $500. I thought my homeowners policy covered me for losses like this. Am I wrong?



A. You are not wrong. Your insurance company did cover you but not for an unlimited amount. Your homeowners policy covers your belongings, even if you are away from home, in the amount of $500 for jewelry and $500 for furs, both in the aggregate.

We suggest that the next time you are taking along more than the homeowners policy covers, you take out a floater policy to provide you with the extra coverage you need.

Black Heritage Materials at Tacoma Public Library

by Edna Jackson

In recent months, information has been provided to the library's Citizen's Affirmative Action Advisory Committee about ethnic materials within the library for people of color in the Tacoma community. The discussions were quite illuminating and covered such topics as trends in Children's books toward eliminating sexism and stereotyping of people of color; controversial books concerning racism and sexism such as Little Black Sambo and Pippi Longstocking and the various reference and other books of interest to persons of color.

A quick inventory of Main Library shows a variety of materials written for and by persons of color. For example, new books in the Children's Department of the TPL include: two biographies (1) Paul Robeson by Black authoress Eloise Greenfield who also wrote the book Rosa Parks which won the first Carter G. Woodson Award for Social Education (2) Arthur Mitchell written by Black author Toby Tobias tells the story of Mitchell's years of training in ballet and how he started the internationally known Dance Theatre of Harlem. The Children's Department fiction collection includes the new work by Black authoress June Jordan, New Life: New Room. This is about the life of a Black family living in a project and needing more space. Black Women of Valor (j 920.7) also new in the Children's Department, was written by Olive W. Burt and tells about the stories of four Black women who won success in their chosen fields through talent, determination and undaunted valor.

Diane Wolf's Chinese Writing: An Introduction (j 495.1) shows the different Chinese characters, sentences, etc. and is probably for youngsters in junior high and above. David C. Cooke's Island China is the "story of the Chinese on Taiwan."

Another new book in Children's is The Houses The Indians Built by Sigmund Lavine. This book covers the different types of housing built by different Indian tribes. The Children's Department has now begun preparing a heading for "Nonstereotyped" books which would include nonracial and nonsexist stereotyping. All books which seemingly fit under this heading would be listed.

Some of the materials available in the specialized collection of the Northwest Room (NWR) includes the twenty (20) volume collection of Edward Curtice's photographs with accompanying portfolios of plates entitled The North American Indians. This set was last appraised at a value of over $80,000.00. Overall, the NWR has several thousand volumes on Native Americans including government documents.

A recent acquisition of the NWR which should prove very useful for historical study is "Blacks in the Pacific Northwest, 1788-1972: A Bibliography of Published Works and of Unpublished Source Materials on the Life and Contributions of Black People in the Pacific Northwest" The Seattle Republican a Black edited paper published between 1894-1915, is available on microfilm for the years 1908-1913. NWR's collection of materials on Japanese Americans includes numerous propaganda items during World War II and documents on Japanese American War Relocation Authority.

One book which I have begun reading and consider an outstanding work is Zulu Kings (968.4) by Brian Roberts which features on Shaka, one of the greatest of military leaders. The book has been reviewed by the now President of Zululand who considers it a great work. A Treasury of African Folklore just received at the TPL and authored by Harold Courlander is a 600 page volume covering "the oral literature, Traditions, Myths, Legends", etc. of Africa.

Another new book in Literature, The African Image by Ezekiel Mphahlele has one chapter entitled "Negritude Revisited" which may prove interesting reading also. One particular noteworthy reference work in the Literature Department is A Bibliography of Afro-American Print and Non-Print Resources in Libraries of Pierce County Washington published by the Tacoma Community College.

Other large works are Black Poets of the United States by Jean Wagner and African Authors by Donald Herdeck.

The aforementioned works are just a part of the library materials which should be of interest to persons of color. The library is open to suggestions to aid in serving members of its ethnic community.

Tacoma Youth Recreation and Culture Center is Still in Progress

by Barbara Henderson

The Tacoma Youth Recreation and Culture Center is still in the procedure of getting things ready for the youth. This center, directed by Rev. Marcell A. Johnson and Jeffrey B. Henderson will provide Tacoma rea area youth with supervised-organized recreational past-times. The location is 610 South 18th Street. The Center will be offering four classes, percussion, music, drama, batik and art. Applications for classes can be picked up at the Malcolm X Community Center, Urban League, the Tacoma FACTS and various places throughout the community. In the near future, they will be having a picnic and a dance. For more information contact Jeffrey B. Henderson at 383-3007 or 572-4174.

SR:16 Still A Problem

State Route 16 (Sixth Avenue) continues to be a problem for both the motoring public and Tacoma police officers. The Traffic Division has additional personnel assigned to State Route 16, from Remann Hall to the Narrows Bridge, especially during peak traffic periods and on weekends.

"We have found it necessary to assign more personnel to help keep traffic moving smoothly," commented Captain William Luebke, Traffic Commander. "As a result of the necessity to assign personnel to control the volume, we've accomplished one objective, at least we have some control over major violators."

The Captain pointed out that violations, however, are not the major problem surrounding the route. "There's just too much traffic for the space available," he explained. The police department said the additional personnel along Sixth Avenue was costing about $1,272 per week or nearly $66,000 per year. The department's administration still hopes the state will be able to locate some added highway funds for relocation and construction of SR 16 prior to the original schedule which placed the relocation far down on the list of priorities.

"With the coming of Trident, we really need a new route," Luebke continued. "We understand the state's problems with highway funds and just hope some new money will become available to ease the problems we face each day and those which motorists are becoming familiar with as they traverse this main arterial between the Narrows Bridge and the new section of SR 16 which ties into Interstate 5."

Greek legend tells that Amphion played the flute so finely that an assortment of stones danced into walls and houses of their own accord, forming Thebes.

Portland Avenue Traffic Advisory

Portland Avenue, between Puyallup Avenue and East 28th Street, has developed into another traffic "hot spot" according to Tacoma Police Captain William Luebke. Luebke, Traffic Division Commander, said that four-block section of Portland Avenue had recorded 11 accidents during the month of June and was continuing to be the scene of even more accidents this month.

"Our personnel are patrolling this area, especially at those times when accident statistics indicate that the most accidents are taking place," Luebke explained. "By employing selective enforcement, concentrating manpower at the times when the situation is the most critical, we hope to reduce the hazards in the immediate future."

Luebke said no specific pattern was developing along Portland Avenue, but indicated speed and failure to yield by turning vehicles appeared to be major causative factors. "With this advisory, we hope the motoring public will be more aware of the hazards and travel the route a little more carefully," Luebke concluded.

It's Important To Know The Facts!

LETTERS to the Editor

While waiting for my car to be washed, I happened across your newspaper, The Tacoma Facts and read your editorial entitled "Children Deserve Better Training."

I was much impressed with your article, which incidently encouraged me to continue and read your entire paper. It is just this style of responsible journalism which needs to come to the attention of the general public more often.

Good luck to you and The Tacoma Facts and I hope your advertisers are as pleased with your paper as I have been.

Sincerely, Terry L. Neal, President, Royal of Washington, Inc.

The weather was great, West Seattle Golf Course was in good shape and a field of nearly 100 golfers battled for a good showing.

GETTING KROC-ED

Just about two years ago, there was a lot of hubbub around the Seattle sports community that the San Diego Padres baseball team might have their bags packed and a moving van on standby notice---with Seattle as the intended port of arrival. Trouble was, then, that the Padres were floundering financially, and it didn't look like there was much help to be had in San Diego.

Seattle baseball fans aren't too proud to lust after another city's baseball team, after our own Seattle Pilots were spirited away to Milwaukee after their first and only season here, in 1969. But two years ago, San Diegans were in no mood to let their Padres become our Rainiers (or Pilot Jr.'s or Whatevers), so they frantically went around looking for someone to get them out of their pickle.

The man they found has a lot of experience with pickles--he has on put right in the middle of each and every hamburger his McDonald's Hamburgers chain produces. (That's 14,785,971,873 pickles, as of April 20, 1975, the McDonald's literature says).

Ray A. Kroc, founder of McDonald's, back in 1955 and now their Chairman of the Board, has now been owner of the San Diego Padres for going on two years. He was a Seattle visitor this week, and following the official reason for his visit--an address to the University Kiwanis Club--Kroc talked to sports reporters.

"I've been a (baseball) fan for 60 years," Kroc claims, a statement easily believed when you consider that he's now 72 years old. One wonders how long he's been a hamburger fan. At any rate, both of his businesses infect the other, or seem to--Kroc has been applying the same merchandising techniques to his baseball team that have helped McDonalds sell over 16 billion hamburgers in 20 years; and, sometimes fighting the crowds at a McDonald's stand is like fighting for a baseball fouled into the stands.

Something else interesting is the way baseball has influenced the business side of McDonald's. Baseball is known for its plethora of statistics: the annual tally sheets cover hundreds of pages and detail everything from stolen bases to the number of pitches thrown by a pitcher (and probably how many chews he gives his snuff while on the mound). Well, while here Kroc supplied reporters with some fact sheets that he had prepared for Mc Donald's 20th Anniversary last April; and one to them read something like baseball's annual Book of Facts.

That number of pickles quoted above is from the facts heet, some other facts:

16 billion hamburgers laid end to end would measure 1,019,406 miles and circle the Earth 41.5 times at the equator.

The 16 billion buns needed to house those burgers required 914,198,216 pounds of flour, or enough to make one loaf of bread almost as big as Hawaii's Diamond Head.

In20 years, McDonald's has sold 4,009,600,000 pounds of potatoes in the form of french fries, laid end to end, those fries would reach all the way across France.

And it would take one person 160,000 years to eat 16 billion hamburgers by himself.

All of this brings to mind the old quip about McDonalds, "The sign says over 16 billion hambergers served--but it doesn't say how many have been eaten!"

Anyway, how's the baseball business as compared to the hamburger business? Are the Padres playing better ball than they did the first day Kroc saw them--and called it "the most studpid baseball I've seen?"

"Yes", Kroc sighs, "but we have a long way to go."

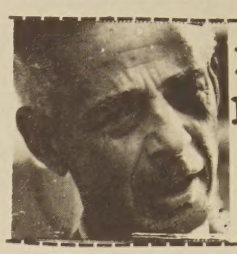
Maybe Kroc should borrow a thought from one of his hamburger competitors; threatn the rest of the National League, tell them there's a comer in San Diego, a powerhouse soon to be reconed with. Use a fancy slogan, shout to the world of things to come.

Would you believe, "Watch Out, McNational League?"

Maybe it loses too much in the translation.

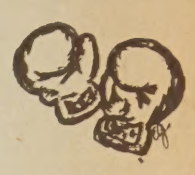
A REPORTER once asked Pablo Picasso why mature men generally look younger than mature women. Picasso thought for a minute, then explained: "It's because a woman of 40 is usually 50."

THE FACTS SPORTS SCENE



Ringside Northwest

by Joe West



Hi Boxing Fans-I hope you have missed our little notes as much as I have missed doing them, but I can tell you this Tommy Howard and I have had a ball the last month, as most of you know we have been out of town first we were in Los Angeles for almost three weeks and then Hawaii for ten days, and you know that we enjoyed both trips. The time we spent in Honolulu was very gratifying as Howard proved to me that he is ready for the big time as far as boxing is concerned. First of all he was the first boxer I have had that won a main event in Los Angeles then he did better than any fighter that I have taken oveseas but in my mind as of this moment he will do better than Scott in the Future. As I worte my agent in New York and told him that Tommy will not embarress anyone when he fights anywhere in the world. I know that many of you have been to Hawaii but this was my first trip there since that little war was fought in the forties and let me say things have changed, if ever anyone can say they have been to paradise then we can say we have been there too. Honestly, friends, I have been to paradise, the wind, sun, and also the rain is heavenly, the most friendly people in the world must live there, wherever we went it was like meeting old friends. Everyone had a friendly greeting and smiles that you had to pinch yourself to find out if it was true, I could go on and on about the people and the weather, but I'll come back to it in some other week. First let me tell you about the phone calls and bouts that Tommy has been offered since his fight over there, they have come from everywhere, even here in town, since Tommy has been established as a world class fighter. Now everyone wants to get in the act, while we were in Honolulu, we received a call from San Francisco for a fight and also a call from Miami, after we got home a call from Nova Scotia and Mexico City. Now how about that? As I told Tommy, he has to be prepared now for anything and anywhere so being the fighter that he is, he is now back in the gym, and here is your invitation to come on down and watch the best fighter in his weight in this town to show you his tuff. I'll stop here and say ALOHA to you all. More next week. --CI BON
